Artist Statement: As an artist unbound by classical training, my journey into the world of painting began not in the halls of academia, but through a personal quest for creative expression. My approach to art is rooted in exploration and spontaneity. I am self-taught, having embraced the school of experience, where each canvas is both a blank slate and a teacher. My process begins with a concept, but I am committed to the fluidity of creativity, allowing each piece to evolve and lead me, rather than being rigidly guided by initial intentions. What sets my art apart is not just the visual impact but the tactile experience it offers. I stray from conventional tools, choosing instead to employ objects that are typically alien to the art, such as spatulas, sponges, various construction tools, and my hands directly on the canvas. Each piece I create is an adventure, a leap into the unknown, where the only certainty is the starting point. My art is a reflection of this journey, capturing the essence of discovery and the joy of creation.
