Artist Statement: In 4th grade, I gathered some interesting rocks and shaped them into the form of a man, creating my first art piece, on exhibit during the tour. Since then, my work continues to reflect attention to intricate details in small, rescued odds and ends. I get lost in the creative process of layering the shapes of these pieces to create even more intricate and detailed shapes. This ability to escape to another place through my art has been especially purposeful throughout the pandemic. My current work represents coping and surviving throughout the isolation of these past years.
